Resource Guide: Federal Funding Opportunities to Address the Opioid Crisis in Rural Communities

October 2018

The opioid epidemic is one of the most pressing issues facing the United States. In 2016, five times as many people died of a prescription opioid overdose compared to 1999. Congress has recently increased funding to combat the opioid crisis, including through the anticipated SUPPORT for Patients and Communities Act, the 21st Century Cures Act and most recent budget, which contained an additional $3.3 billion in funding for opioids.

As communities across the nation struggle with this epidemic, rural areas tend to be hit harder due to a lack of treatment options and providers. As governments, health care providers, and community organizations look to expand treatment, increase education, and come up with new solutions to address the impact of the disease on their communities, there are federal resources that can help.

This guide provides a sampling of the federal funding resources available to communities, especially rural ones, to combat the opioid epidemic. To see grants that you may be eligible for, you can jump to the relevant section below. Since grantees often partner with other types of entities, it may be useful to check multiple categories.

This guide is not an exhaustive list of all federal resources available to rural communities or to entities addressing substance use or opioid use disorder. Additionally, application deadlines for 2018 may have already passed. To find additional resources and future funding opportunities, go to grants.gov or go to the individual websites of relevant agencies:

- ACF = Administration on Children and Families, Department of Health and Human Services
- HRSA = Health Resources and Services Administration, Department of Health and Human Services
- SAMHSA = Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, Department of Health and Human Services
- DOJ = Department of Justice
- USDA = Department of Agriculture
